The Battle of Copenhagen of 1801 ( Danish: Slaget p\u00e5 Reden ), also known as the First Battle of Copenhagen to distinguish it from the Second Battle of Copenhagen in 1807, was a naval battle in which a British fleet fought and defeated a smaller force of the Dano-Norwegian Navy anchored near Copenhagen on 2 April 1801.

Battle of Copenhagen (1801) - Wikipedia

Battle of Copenhagen, (April 2, 1801), British naval victory over Denmark in the Napoleonic Wars. There were several reasons for the animosity between the countries. The armed-neutrality treaty of 1794 between Denmark and Sweden, to which Russia and Prussia adhered in 1800, was considered a hostile act by England.

Battle of Copenhagen | Summary | Britannica

Nicholas Pocock - The Battle of Copenhagen, 2 April 1801 The most famous act of insubordination in the annals of the Royal Navy occurred when Vice-Admiral Lord Nelson, second-in-command of the British fleet at Copenhagen in the 74-gun battleship Elephant, put his spyglass to his blind eye and said to Elephant's captain, the future Admiral Sir Thomas Foley, 'I really do not see the signal.'

Battle of Copenhagen - British Battles

Battle of Copenhagen, 2 April 1801. ... His actions before the battle of Copenhagen disprove the idea that Nelson always charged recklessly into battle. Copenhagen gave him the chance to study an enemy position in detail and come up with a detailed plan to defeat them. He continued to dictate this plan until the early hours of the morning, not ...

Battle of Copenhagen 1801 - HistoryOfWar.org

The events post 1801 are somewhat rushed through but the reader is reminded that Denmark's power was substantially weakened by the end of the Napoleonic era. A little more correlation between the events of 1801 and the battle of 1807 would be helpful. But overall a useful reminder that the Baltic also became a theatre of war in Napoleonic Europe.

The first Battle of Copenhagen in 1801-the naval battle celebrated in Britain as one of Nelson's great victories-and the second-the British army's assault on the city in 1807 in which Wellington played a prominent part-were episodes in the continental struggle to resist the power of the French.

The Two Battles of Copenhagen 1801 and 1807: Britain and ...

The Second Battle of Copenhagen was a British bombardment of the Danish capital, Copenhagen, in order to capture or destroy the Dano-Norwegian fleet, during the Napoleonic Wars. The incident led to the outbreak of the Anglo-Russian War of 1807, which ended with the Treaty of \u00c5rebro in 1812. Britain's first response to Napoleon's Continental system was to launch a major naval attack on Denmark. Although ostensibly neutral, Denmark was under heavy French pressure to pledge its fleet to ...

Battle of Copenhagen (1807) - Wikipedia

History of the 1801 naval Battle of Copenhagen. Well written, well organized with perspectives from both the British and Danish sides. Author weaves a good mix of the political maneuverings in London, Copenhagen, and St. Petersburg and the tensions between Admiral Nelson and his Commanding officer.
